EMPLOYMENT

Parliamentary Budget Office releases Labour Market Assessment 2014. Overall, the PBO found that most labour market indicators remain below trend, although continue to recover from the 2008-09 recession. The weakness in the labour market is also reflected in the modest growth in wages and compensation over the recovery. In an attempt to explain the continued weakness in the labour market, PBO examined indicators of labour shortages and skills mismatches but found little evidence in support of a national labour shortage or skills mismatch in Canada.

Statistics Canada Labour Force Survey February 2014 reports little change in employment that month, and the unemployment rate remained at 7.0 percent. There has been little overall employment growth in Canada since August 2013. Compared with 12 months earlier, employment increased by 95,000 (+0.5 percent) and the unemployment rate was unchanged. Over the same period, the number of hours worked rose 0.7 percent.

Statistics Canada reported that in January 2014, 502,500 people received regular Employment Insurance (EI) benefits, down 1.9 percent (-9,900) from the previous month. This decline follows a period of relative stability in the number of EI beneficiaries that began in May 2013. Québec, British Columbia and Prince Edward Island experienced reductions in the number of people receiving regular EI benefits in January. There was little or no change in the other provinces.

Statistics Canada reported that average weekly earnings of non-farm payroll employees were $925 in January, virtually unchanged from the previous month. On a year-over-year basis, weekly earnings increased 3.0 percent. The 3.0 percent increase in weekly earnings during the 12 months to January reflected a number of factors, including wage growth, changes in the composition of employment by industry, occupation and level of job experience, as well as average hours worked per week. Non-farm payroll employees worked an average of 32.9 hours per week in January, down from 33.0 hours in December. On a year-over-year basis, the average hours worked was unchanged.

The government will provide eligible Veterans, survivors or dependents with voluntary compensation for Earnings Loss, Canadian Forces Income Support and War Veterans Allowance benefits dating back to May 29, 2012. This measure is meant to cover the gap between the government's decision to end the disability pension offset and the day the decision came into effect. Changes to the way Earnings Loss and Canadian Forces Income Support benefits are calculated came into effect on October 1, 2012, and a similar change to the War Veterans Allowance calculation came into effect on October 1, 2013, at a total cost of $273.1 million over five years. These changes also mean improved services for Canadian Veterans, including approximately 560 additional Veterans now having access to the Veterans Independence Program for snow clearing, grass cutting and home cleaning services. The compensation announced will be made through a one-time payment to more than 5,000 eligible individuals, including Veterans, survivors or dependents. Changes are subject to Parliamentary approval of the Budget Implementation Act 2014.
